The US Federal Reserve (Fed) is going to put another $16 billion (€11.69 billion) into the banking system temporary funding reserve. This injection was made by purchasing real state credit debt.

The US Federal reserve (Fed) is going to put another $16 billion (€11.69 billion) into the banking system temporary funding reserve.

This injection was made by purchasing real state credit debt and it is the second announced today. This morning, the body that regulates the US monetary market said it had put $19 billion into this reserve.

The $35 billion (€25.6 billion), which is the sum of the two investments, is the largest capital injection in a single day since 14 September 2001, in the midst of the terrorist attacks. Yesterday, the fed injected $24 billion into this market.

All this investment is still well below the €155 billion the European Central Bank injected into the euro zone monetary market yesterday and today, a record amount.
